Warſaw, November 13.

SINCE the Signing of the Treaty of Pacification, ſeveral Conferences have been held between the King's Plenipotentiaries and the Commiſſioners of the Confederates, in order to prepare ſuch Matters as are to be decided by the Dyet, which is ſhortly to be held, purſuant to the ſaid Treaty. The eſtabliſhing a ſufficient Fund, and fixing a Method of paying the Army conſtantly, has occaſioned very warm Debates. The King's Plenipotentiaries having always inſiſted, as the chief Condition of diſmiſſing the Saxon Troops, that proper Meaſures ſhould be taken for maintaining a regular Army, and paying the ſame regularly, without which the Crown and Kingdom cannot be ſafe, propoſed, that the Inhabitants of every Palatinate or Diſtrict ſhall collect and pay to the principal Officer of the Troops on their Repartition, the Sums at which they ſhall be taxed for the Subſiſtance of ſuch Troops: This Propoſition moſt of the Deputies of the Confederates oppoſed with great Heat, for the following Reaſons. Formerly it was the Cuſtom for certain Commiſſioners to meet yearly at Lemberg, or at Radom, for the Repartition of Winter Quarters; at this annual Meeting the Generals preſided, and a kind of Commiſſary was eſtabliſhed in each Palatinate for receiving the Sums charged on it for the military Service. The Gentleman who could make Intereſt for this Employment of Commiſſary, and get to be continued in it two or three Years, ſeldom failed of inriching himſelf, by favouring ſome, and over-burthening others, and in the mean Time the Troops were very ill provided for; and this was born with by the neighbouring Gentlemen, becauſe they hoped to procure the ſame Employment in their Turn. The King judges it neceſſary to reform this Abuſe, by which (as Experience has ſhewn) the Army of the Kingdom would be ever liable to be reduced to a ſmall Number of Men, without Arms, without Cloathing, often without Bread, ill diſciplined, and incapable of the Service they ought to perform on Occaſion. After a long Conteſt, 'twas agreed to hear the Opinion of the Marſhals on this Point, and then to refer the whole Matter to the Deciſion of the Dyet. The Army being to be disbanded immediately after the Ratification of the Treaty, and a new one to be formed, and the Nomination of the Officers being almoſt intirely reſerved to the King; the Deputies of the Confederates have been ſollicitous to know on what Perſons the Command of the ſeveral Regiments is intended to be conferred, and to whom the leſſer Commiſſions alſo are to be given: The King's Plenipotentiaries have thereupon named ſeveral Perſons to them, whom they judged his Majeſty might be diſpoſed to favour on that Occaſion; and this alſo created a pretty warm Debate, the Deputies taking Exceptions to ſome, who, in the late Troubles, have diſtinguiſhed themſelves on the Side of the Court-Party. But there is Ground to hope, that in the enſuing Dyet Expedients will be found for compromiſing, or otherwiſe adjuſting amicably, what is yet undetermined.

Genoa, Nov. 24. Four Deputies are appointed on the Part of this Republick, to compliment Mr. Davenant, Envoy of his Britannick Majeſty, on his Arrival here: Their Names are, Sig. Centurione, Son of the preſent Doge, Sig. Durazzo, Son of the Genoueſe Envoy who lately came from England, and Sig. Brignole and Gentile. An Engliſh Ship which came in from Meſſina on the 18th Inſtant, brought Advice, that the Spaniſh Squadron of Men of War and Gallies which put into that Port after they left the Venetian Fleet, were ſailed from thence to return home. On the 20th we had Advice that a Man of War of 62 Guns, belonging to the King of Sicily, was ſailed from Villa-franca with Stores for Rigging and Arming another Man of War of 50 Guns newly built at Palermo. On the 21ſt came in a French Veſſel, in 14 Days from Tunis; the Maſter reports, that the Gallies of that Place which joined the Turkiſh Fleet the laſt Summer, were not returned thither when he came away. On the 21ſt came in likewiſe, three Genoueſe Ships of War, which had been in the Levant in the Pope's Service; they came laſt from Malta, and parted off Civita Vecchia with another Ship of War belonging to this State, which was to land ſome of the Pope's Marines there.
